Sep 23 Thursday nite.

[21 September, 1933]

How do you do again Mumsy Bear —

I'm sorry to bother you but I fear you must wade thru another letter.

I'm partially settled. At least I'm in my permanent room, have my suitcases emptied into my drawers & up on the closet shelf. My radio tuned to a symphony concert, & your picture before me, so here goes.

Mrs. Underhill came this afternoon and took Leslie & me to tea, then to get a waste basket, & finally to dinner at the New Moon. It was awfully nice, & we had a very fine time. We went to Seiler's to tea — cinnamon toast & tea with lemon for 25¢, & a very good dinner for 25¢. Mrs. Carr remembered me & asked me how things were going. Mrs. Underhill stayed there tonight, so we brought them home. I guess.

That's about all that happened today, except the Personality test, which was just the same as the one I had last 2 years ago in C.C. & contained such questions as preferring to stand rather than as a late comer to take a front seat etc.
Tomorrow we have an interest test supposed to show us our vocation, and I think I've had that too, but I can always take it over.

It's so nice not being a Freshman

I mean you feel a bit superior & quite old stuff already, & they look rather new but lots of them horribly sophisticated. But I'm being agreeably surprised - people seem to be very willing to make you feel at home & aside from holding out welcoming arms - they really don't succeed in giving me the least inferior feeling.

Besides I know lots of the transfers pretty well too, & don't seem to feel a bit strange. I'm quite delighted & I'm just beginning to realize that I'm actually at Wellesley. Kinda swell, eh, what?

Dear dear it's getting late. But needless to say I enjoyed your letter greatly. And the weekend of acts is ^{the} as far as I know would be perfectly marvelous. By that time I'll probably have a list made out that will stun you!

Oh they're playing "Who's afraid of the Big Bad Wolf?" It's so cute.
So cute nite, on that have to the bestest
Ginger
